Our four pillars

The association provides:

1

Representation

BIFA reflects the views of its members in both national and international governing bodies and institutions, and by political representation.

BIFA also facilitates Policy Group meetings with government officials and regional meetings allowing Members to effectively express their views.

Information and Guidance on Technical Matters

BIFA communicates industry relevant information via multiple channels. The BIFA website, a monthly newsletter and regional meetings, are the main ways that we communicate, and our staff receive numerous telephone and email enquiries about practical and technical matters.

Training and Development

BIFA provides industry training not only to members, but also to international traders. Courses are run throughout the year. The subjects covered include customs procedures, air cargo security, import/export and international trade procedures.

Industry Promotion

BIFA encourages logistics as a career path and was instrumental in establishing a freight forwarding apprenticeship. Further career promotion is undertaken in school events.

Illustration – main brand

Illustration is a key element of the BIFA brand.

All illustrations must be consistent in style and use the primary BIFA colour palette only.

There are two permitted illustration styles, one for the main brand and a second, more playful style, exclusively for the Young Forwarder Network and for use when addressing a younger audience about apprenticeships.

Illustration – Young Forwarder Network and Apprentices

A second, more playful illustration style, is available exclusively for the Young Forwarder Network and for use when addressing a younger audience about apprenticeships.

Photography

Photography can be used to support the brand illustration style.

Images should be good quality and show the industry in action.

Shots of people should be natural and ideally the subjects unaware of the camera.

Photos should be used in full colour.

Freight Service Awards

The Freight Service Awards has it's own brand style. This is exclusively for the use of the Freight Service Awards and should not be replicated, in part or as a whole, on other BIFA assets.

The background of the awards assets is BIFA dark blue with a black gradient overlay. For instances where a solid colour is necessary, such as on eshots, the awards blue should be used.

Application

Logo and descriptor title on printed assets

On printed assets the BIFA logo is anchored to a keyline at the top of the artwork.

The BIFA logo sits on the right and, if necessary, a descriptor of the service area (e.g. BIFA Training) or series of documents (e.g. BIFA Good Practice Guides) can sit on the left.

On an A4 document the keyline should be 0.5pt thick.

The logo should follow rules on the exclusion zone (see page 7) with a gap the height of the 'B' in BIFA between the keyline and the logo.

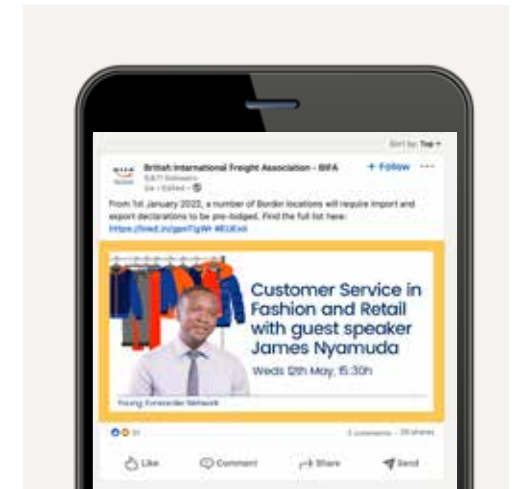

The descriptor title should align at the top with the top of the BIFA name in the logo.

Application of the secondary colour palette

The secondary colour palette is used to highlight communications for BIFA Training, the BIFA Young Forwarder Network, Apprenticeships and environmental issues.

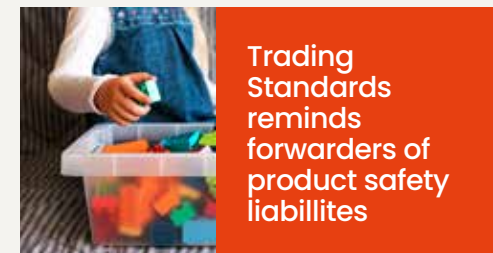

This can be done as a stripe on the left hand side, a background colour, accent colour or border.

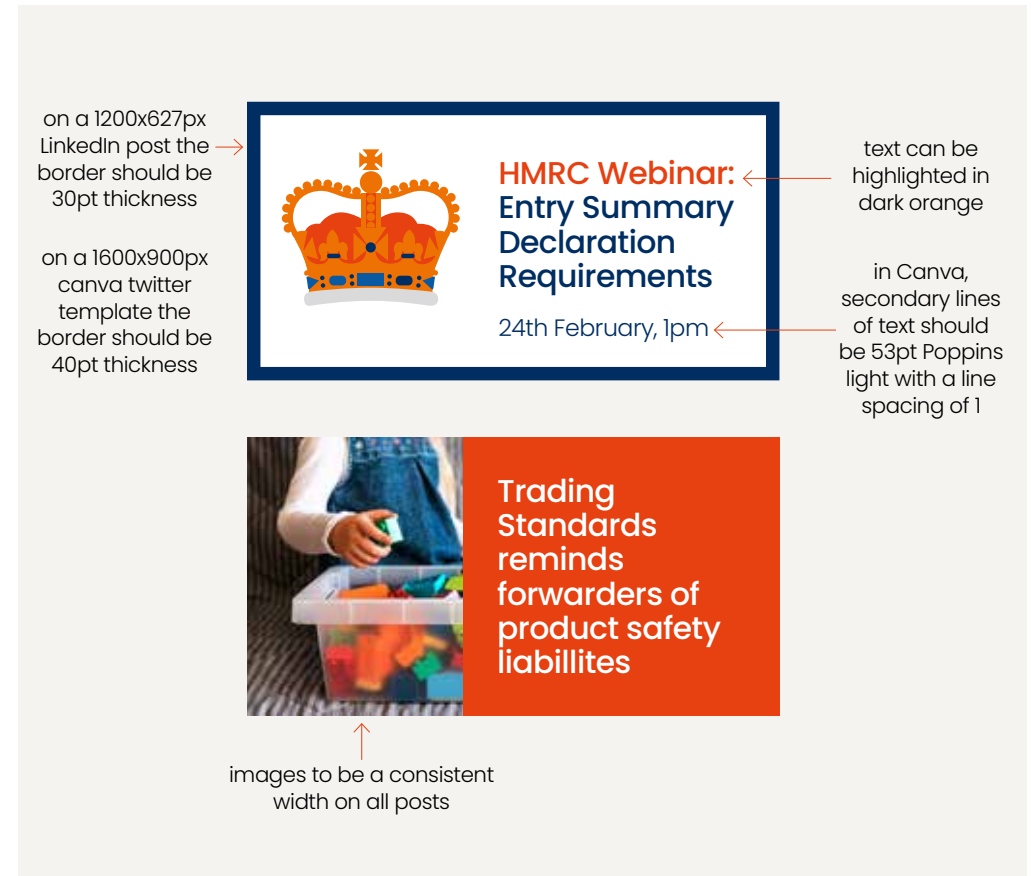

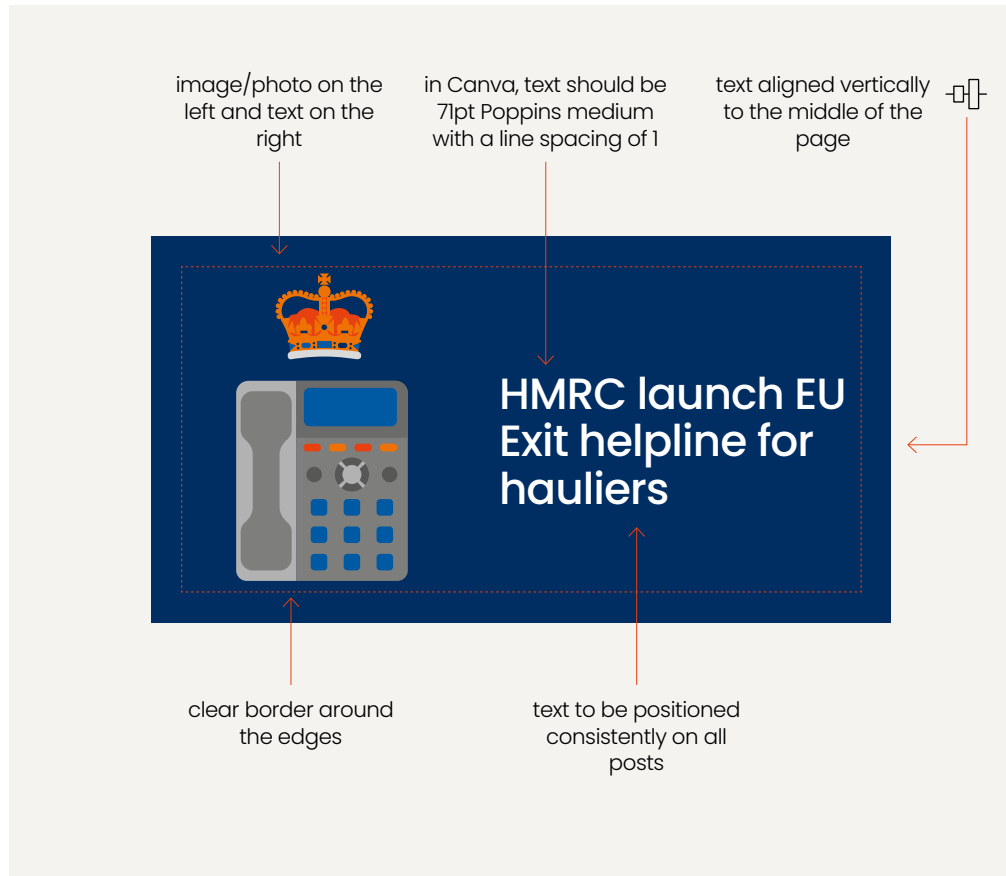

Social media post templates

BIFA social media post graphics should:

- not feature the BIFA logo, as this is already incorporated within the social platform layout
- have a clean and uncluttered layout for maximum impact and ease of use
- use three options of background colour – BIFA dark blue, BIFA dark orange and white, for flexibility and variety within social feeds
- utilise a border around graphics with white background to make sure they don't get lost on the white background in Twitter
- have the option to use illustration or photography

Social media post templates

Social media post templates

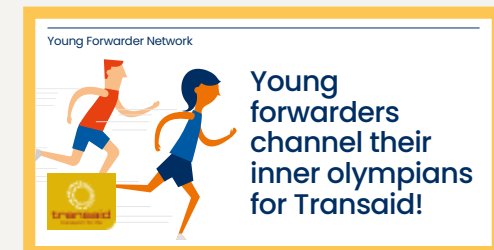

- BIFA Training, Young Forwarder Network, Apprenticeships and environmental issues are colour coded in line with the brand guidelines (see page 12)
- use of the keyline and descriptor title at the top (for use on these areas of the business only)
- option to use illustration or photography

Graphics should follow guidance for BIFA posts on page 22.

In addition:

descriptor title should be 28pt Poppins regular and be positioned on the left, below the keyline clear border around all edges, within the coloured border

Social media post templates

white background to be used when featuring third party logos third party logos should be placed bottom left and not be too large third party logos can be positioned to work around the illustration used, but should still appear on the left in the illustration/image space

the right of the graphic should be used for text only
